The article presents the properties of mining wastes from the Bogdanka Mine. Most important geotechnical parameters, which should be known in designing engineering embankments, are discussed in details. These parameters are: grain size distribution, water content, optimum moisture content, maximum dry density of solid particles, soil permeability and shear strength of soil. These parameters will be characterised in relation to the different storage time.